

Today is Judgment Sunday, and the Gospel is according to Matthew 25:31-46. Within the Gospel, Christ Jesus gives us a recount of what will happen upon His return. Here he tells us how we will be judged and states He will ask whether we fed the hungry, gave drink to those who thirst, welcomed a stranger, clothed the naked, visited the sick, and visited those in prison. Those that do these things to the least, it is as if it is done for Jesus Christ. These people He calls righteous, and are granted eternal life.

My dearest ones, as we continue our journey towards Pascha—Easter, let us renew our dedication to those in need. Let us remember the least of our brothers and sisters of humanity and all of creation. Where we can let us feed, welcome, cloth, visit, pray and many other numerous ways to help and bring comfort. In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, now and always and forever and ever, amen.
